SUPPORTING INDIVIDUAL GROWTH

Whenever anyone visits Warminster School there's one thing everyone agrees on, and that's our sense of community. Visitors always comment on how special it is, how unusual. And it's not just our teaching staff – from prep pupils to catering staff, our sense of warmth and our values are evident in whoever you cross paths with – be it our groundsmen, matrons, sports coaches or sixth formers. Because we all work together closely to keep those values alive.

“We are proud of our sense of community, a culture of encouragement and participation in which it's ok to struggle or even fail sometimes.

Our website is good, but lots of schools have good websites and brochures which give the same message, so please come and visit us. I ask all visitors to look to see if people are smiling, do they look happy, what does the interaction between staff and pupils (as well as older and younger pupils) look like?

Warminster is a beautiful school, but schools are not about buildings and facilities but about people and relationships. Being part of a community means that everyone has to contribute and play their part: giving as well as getting. Our educational philosophy is simple. What happens outside the classroom is just as important as what happens inside.

We invite you to attend one of our open days so you can discover for yourself just how special our sense of community is.”
